Ex-Chancellor Exchequer Speaks in Montreal on Peace

CHURCHILL IN MONTREAL SAYS HE IS STUDENT

In Canada to Study Conditions, Particularly Imperial Trade

Canadian Press

MONTREAL, Aug. 14.—Nearly 1,400 persons gathered at the Auditorium here last evening to listen to the views of the present top man in Ottawa, Sir Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer.

Mr. Churchill said he had come to study the conditions in Canada, particularly the economic situation and the best means of promoting inter-imperial trade, and that he was more interested in the preservation of the empire than in the promotion of world peace.

The empire had all it wanted living. All that now was desired was the opportunity to develop under peaceful conditions. He agreed with the condition now existed and he agreed with the statement that the world had not been better for fifty years.

Empire and Disarmament

From peace's own natural turned to disarmament and in that case example. The army was smaller than before, but the navy was much larger, as great as that of Britain's nearest neighbor, Australia. The navy was smaller. Britain and the United States had agreed on a compact to limit naval armaments.

$400,000 had been donated by the Canadian Legion to the Empire Fund towards the sports prize fund, and a large program is under way.

He also spoke of the friendly relations between the German Embassy and the Swiss team at 4 p.m.

Many New Settlers Arriving In City

The population of the city should show material increase before noon Thursday. Nearly 400 new settlers will arrive from Europe and America will arrive by special Canadian express tonight and will reach here early tomorrow morning. They will depend on the Peace River line.

Mr. Churchill said that the first arrivals would be French. It is definitely known that the first arrivals arriving tonight, will leave tomorrow for Ryecrest. Mr. Churchill did not believe France would ever be willing to give up Alsace-Lorraine, where her only safeguard was the navy.

"I am not sure that if France made demands that the British government would stand on a suzerain basis today," he said.

The British government was good relations and the promotion of common interests between Germany and France.

British Policy

It had been the central policy of the British government to promote a common understanding of the common cause of France and to stimulate good-will between those countries.

Good-will between the two countries and reparations all our policy has been to bring about a general peace of war, said Mr. Churchill. There were many dangers in nations drawing up their own frontiers, as many as the penal consequences of war. Quite naturally, a union of Europe or a union which made a solution of the European problems impossible.

Regarding Mr. Snowden's attitude, Mr. Churchill said, "subject to

Jean Castle died suddenly on Monday morning, Aug. 13, after a few days from the time of his last lower bowel, according to a report made to the coroner by Dr. C. G.

McGillivray, and M. MacFarlane, and M. Ogilvie.

Dr. Ogilvie, a member of the Coronation Medical Association, was attending the child at the time of death, and he said he had no option but to let the child die.

He then said that an enema should be given and sent a nurse from his office to care for the child.

He later came to see the child again, and Dr. Ogilvie said he would take charge of the case as a nurse, but Dr. Ogilvie said he was not a nurse although not regularly qualified, and not a registered nurse,

was not a practical nurse. She had called in a doctor on Monday morning, Aug. 10, to determine the cause of the child's illness.

The Christian Science treatment

method was used, and Dr. Ogilvie and a book on science and health with key to the disease were sent.

He noted that the child was not sent to him on an operation under any circumstances.

Dr. Ogilvie, who was visiting the witness stand, stated his daughter had not been present at the office a week before his death had been pronounced.

He merely arrived there was mourning and clutching at her heart, and said she would like to see her stomach and intestines removed, and Dr. Casle on the witness stand, that he had not made a satisfactory examination, and that he was suffering too much pain at the time of death.

The witness said she was surprised that he thought she was the mother of the deceased child.

Hon. L. H. Thomas has gone to do something to increase employment in Britain by encouraging the development in Canada of "enterprises which would require British materials and manufactured articles." As a general proposition that sounds practical. Whether it can be carried out successfully can be found out only by detailed investigation as to what types of enterprises can be developed here which would provide a market for British goods.

It must not be overlooked that Canada is also a manufacturing country, and due for a more rapid industrial development than has yet occurred. Canadian industries will naturally get preference in supplying many of the requirements of Canada's expanding trade. Where these cannot be obtained in Canada, it ought to be possible to work out some sort of arrangement that would help to stimulate industry in the old lands and give employment to idle hands there.

AFTER NINETEEN YEARS

In September, 1910, Hon. G. P. Graves announced the completion of the construction of the Hudson Bay railway. This fall he is to have the privilege of driving the last spike in the completed line. Nineteen years is a sufficiently long time to take in the building of six thousand miles of railway. That one enterprise whose delay cannot be blamed upon the war, in point of fact the only time that construction was carried on in any active way—until three years ago—was when the war was raging.

The Government which came into power in 1911 had no faith in the scheme, and practically abandoned it until a fit of war-time panic urged its completion as a safety measure. Then the Labour Party for Britain's food supply. The lack of money following the war was a reason for further postponement. Building was resumed only when the Canadian Government materialized. Thus what one Liberal Government started nineteen years ago, another Liberal Government is finishing this year; and the Minister who turned the first sod is to drive the last spike after the lapse of almost two decades.

A GREAT WAR CLASSIC APPEARS

From the Regina Daily Star

Great creations require long gestation. Ten years after the war ended the great war classic had appeared—ten years of brooding preparation for the delivery of the simplest strongest and most heartrending of all war stories, as evolved in the mind and soul of a young German soldier, Erich Maria Remarque.

There is something awesome about the solitary triumph of this great story, "All Quiet on the Western Front," of horrors born from the thenness of the scene of the consciousness of this youth, drafted into service on the western front. His mind was seared as by a flame. It took years of healing before he could find expression for his emotion. And he did it with seeming simplicity of the story, nested in its simple perfection of style, to the standards of French rather than German literary craftsmanship that invests it with such grandeur.

In the first six months of its publication in Germany under the title of "Im Westen Nichts Neues," it had sales of 700,000 copies. In France under the title of "L'Amour des Armes," it is now a smash hit, with two more.

Remarque's pen is now being used to gather the stories of the combatants who gathered like himself.

Ottawa—Diverse bills passed at last session extend all records, being sixteen in number. Since the bill to increase the powers of the Auditor General was introduced by Parliament, the increase in applications is causing wide interest.

The Leaning Post

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Bill had a favorite leaning post. The last one that the town could boast. That Bill had leaned so long upon The special point if it were gone.

One night when Bill came in to town He found the post had fallen down.

With grim upon their faces, said:

"Well, Bill, your leaning post is dead."

Bill gave a shrug of wild dismay.

Then quit the town at break of day.

And left the town unknown to seek.

Before he found his legs too weak.

My boy, if this be fate or true,

Now matters little unto you.

The lesson's plainly shown.

Be independent to the end,

And learn to stand alone.

It is to be hoped that Canada is more successful in its efforts to develop

He has forgotten what he learned in school or the facts he learned in school days have gone completely from his mind. He has forgotten how to learn how to learn he can afford to come to the end of the road and go back to school. A college graduate now knows his comprehension day.

Second, he must have learned to see.

But the capacity to observe accurately underlies all effective teaching. He must have learned to see. He must have learned to learn.

For a few of us really worth listening, I am constantly amazed at the way in which otherwise intelligent people can be led into error. They have forgotten what he learned in school or the facts he learned in school days have gone completely from his mind.
